FREE PREVIEW

Your next five jobs can share a brief

A page. A post. An email. A set of questions. A report. When every job starts from a blank conversation, you spend time repeating context and checking different versions of the same facts.

A better-organised workflow starts with one approved input, gives each role a focused assignment, and brings the results back for review.

Imagine preparing...	With one coordinated workflow
A campaign	Copy, posts, emails, ad ideas, FAQs and creative directions.
A new client	Scope, welcome draft, questions, delivery plan, measures and blockers.
A weekly review	Sales, campaigns, delivery, support, content and invoices.

KEEP THE RIGHT EXPECTATION

Parallel tasks can reduce waiting when they are independent. Quality, tool limits and human review still matter.

The complete kit shows how to build the process from the first brief to a reviewed pack. This free preview gives you the starting idea.

TRY ONE SMALL EXERCISE

Find the work that does not need to wait

Think of one project you do repeatedly. Name five draft or analysis tasks that could all use the same approved facts. Then identify the decision that must happen before they start.

My project

Five independent tasks

What must be approved first?

ONE USEFUL INSIGHT

Final review comes after the outputs exist. A task that needs an unfinished answer from another task belongs in a later stage.
